The world's best three-year-olds battle in the 149th running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs. Legendary Churchill Downs welcomes the horse racing world to Louisville, Kentucky today for the first leg of the Triple Crown as 19 horses will take to the gate in the 149th Run for the Roses on the one and ¼ mile dirt track. Morning line favorite Forte (3-1 odds), trained by Todd Pletcher, won't be racing as he was a late scratch. He was coming into the Derby as the leading points earner with five-consecutive wins including the 2022 Breeders' Cup Juvenile and the Grade I Florida Derby at Gulfstream Park back in early April. Fifteen times the horse that won the Florida Derby has gone on to win this race, but none since Always Dreaming in 2017.

This year's field features 20 horses, and they'll run the 1.25-mile track in the hope of a first place finish and $1.86 million prize. The Kentucky Derby is the first leg of the Triple Crown of horse racing, followed by the Preakness two weeks from now and the Belmont Stakes in June.

Current Kentucky Derby 2023 odds (as of Friday afternoon) favor Forte, a horse trained by Todd Pletcher and ridden by Irad Ortiz that stands at 9-2 (formerly 5-1). Not far behind is Bluegrass Stakes winner Tapit Trice at 5-1 (formerly 6-1) and Arkansas Derby champ Angel of Empire at 5-1 (formerly 8-1).

Four horses have been scratched from the list: Skinner, Practical Move, Lord Miles and Continuar.

Churchill Downs is dealing with a bit of a furor over the recent deaths of four horses, which has ignited safety concerns. The venue said, "We have full confidence in our racing surfaces and have been assured by our riders and horsemen that they do as well."
